

Where is AI already in your organization?

Our free, five-minute assessment checks where AI is showing up in your work and what you can do next

Most of the AI conversation is about replacing jobs. But that's the wrong conversation. We should instead be talking about what it looks like when routine work—email follow-ups, completing evaluations, or generating reports—gets taken care of. What could your team accomplish with the extra time and attention?

Where AI can show up

- Staff using their own accounts for work
- Features switched on inside tools you already pay for
- Deliverables from contractors, consultants, freelance writers
- Work done by board members and volunteers
- Requests from or restrictions made by funders, investors, or major clients
- Forms and applications you receive

Get a closer look

- How your organization comes into contact with AI, or where there are blind spots
- Where work is actually done; which tasks happen on software you already pay for
- One next step you can take, with a concrete template you can put in front of your team
